

KILLED THE DALTON GANG.

FOUR OF THEM ARE KILLED AND ONE FATAL WOUNDED.

They Hide Into Coffeyville, Kan., to Clean Out the Two Banks—The Citizens Rise in Their Might, but Three Are Killed and Two Wounded Before They Lay the Law—After One Escapes, but a Posses Are Out After Him—Money Taken From One Bank, but Every Cent of It Recovered—A Famous Band of Desperadoes.

COFFEYVILLE, Kan., Oct. 5.—The Dalton gang, the most notorious in the West, was wiped off the face of the earth here today, but in the battle which resulted in the extermination of three of the desperadoes and two fatally wounded. The desperadoes, who had grown bold as they thought they were above all law and that the officers of the county were powerless against them, attempted to raid the banks of this city, their home, and not only failed, but were killed.

The six outlaws came into town together on horseback about 9:30 o'clock, and, leaving their horses in an alley, walked rapidly across the square. Four entered Gordon's Bank and two the First National Bank. The desperadoes were met by Cashier Ball and the lock would not be open until 10 o'clock. Holding their Winchester on Ball and Teller Carpenter, they said they would wait, taking, meanwhile, the money in the drawer.

Brother Emmett Dalton was the two who were in the First National Bank. He was Ayres, his son Bert, and Teller W. H. Shepherd. They were forced to give up all the money in the safe, which was hastily shoved into bags. The Daltons then forced the three men out of the front door and followed right after them.

The alarm had in the mean time been given, and as the outlaws appeared George Cubine, a merchant, and Express Agent Cox shot one of them, badly wounding him. The outlaws then returned the fire, killing Cubine. The robbers in Gordon's Bank shot out of the window, hitting Ayres and Brown. Both robbers ran back through the town, when they met Baldwin and followed them to the depot.

The citizens being thoroughly aroused by this time, were not and heavy after them, and after a fight in which City Marshal Connelly was killed, succeeded in killing the four desperadoes named and mortally wounding Emmett, who lies in a room here. He will die before morning. If not in time they will be buried. Jim Spears, a lively stable keeper, with his Winchester rifle killed one of the outlaws in as many seconds. This created such a diversion that other citizens were enabled to get close enough to kill another of the robbers.

The three remaining robbers dropped their plunder and mounted their horses, but a posse was quickly in pursuit, and one more of the bandit gang fell from his horse mortally wounded about two miles from town. The sixth and last was being pursued at last accounts. The man who got away is Alvin Karpis. He is being covered by the citizens and is peculiarly appropriate that the man who should be rid of the gang here. Great excitement prevails, and if the other man is found he will be summarily dealt with. The large rewards for the capture of the outlaws, dead or alive, will, if the citizens' wishes are respected, go to the families of the slain.

All of the money was recovered to a cent and turned over to the bank that lost it. Emmett Dalton has made a partial confession that his gang was the same that robbed the Pacific Express car on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway, at Adams station in the Indian Territory. He was last, and committed other daring robberies.

The news was telegraphed to Parsons shortly after 10 o'clock, and General Superintendent Foy of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway with his special car, in which were thirty or forty trusty citizens, with Winchester and shotgun, started at once to assist in running the desperadoes to bay. They found on their arrival that there was but little work for them to do, as the plucky inhabitants at Coffeyville had wound up the careers of the desperadoes. The dead are:

Bob Dalton, Grant Dalton, Tom Hoddy, and George Cubine, merchant; Charles Brown, shoemaker. Fatally Wounded—Emmett Dalton, desperado; Thomas G. Ayres, cashier of the First National Bank; John Baldwin, clerk in Brown's shoe store. Slightly Wounded—T. A. Reynolds, Louis Delaney.

The promptness of the citizens in responding to the alarm was due to the fact that they knew the Daltons were in the town, and they knew their old home. This suspicion dates from the week ago, when a desperado, a drug-gist was awakened at midnight by a knock at his door. He responded, and found Bob Dalton, who wanted a gallon of alcohol, and he wanted it in a hurry. Down in the neighborhood of Coffeyville, where the gang was a beverage, with sugar and water, in preference to whiskey. Dalton told Dalton that he did not keep whiskey, but he would get it for him. Dalton told Dalton that he would get it for him. Dalton told Dalton that he would get it for him.

TENNYSON DYING.

It is Believed That He Has Only a Few More Hours of Life.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The household at Aldworth were watching at the bedside of Alfred Tennyson, the poet laureate, who is dying. Sir Andrew Clark, Dr. Dabbs, Lady Tennyson, Hallam Tennyson, and an old family servant are in the sick chamber. Sir Andrew Clark planned to return to London early in the evening, but he has dismissed his carriage and will remain with his patient until the last.

Sir Andrew Clark and Dr. Dabbs sent word at 9:35 o'clock to the reporters waiting outside the Aldworth gate that Tennyson was dying slowly, painfully, and consciously. Messengers were despatched hurriedly over the Haslemere road to convey the news to the other members of the household. The crowd of reporters stood in silence for the next bulletin from the bedside of the dying poet. At fifteen minutes after seven o'clock Lady Clark left the house and took a carriage to be driven to London over the Haslemere route. At the entrance of the grounds she stopped to answer the inquiries of the reporters. She said that all hope was gone. Tennyson's mind remained clear, but his body was failing. He had been suffering from a long illness, and he was now in the last stages of it.

All hope of Tennyson's recovery was abandoned between 11 and 12 o'clock last night. At 12 o'clock the poet was still alive, but he was now in the last stages of his illness.
